Graduates will demonstrate competency in the subject knowledge of psychology in the domains of research methods, cognition/neuroscience, social, applied psychology, clinical/personality and developmental psychology.

Graduates will demonstrate competency in the subject knowledge of Psychology by demonstrating application of scientific method to solving problems concerning behavioral and cognitive processes, identifying and applying basic research methods in psychology concerning research design, conducting appropriate data analysis techniques, analyzing and interpreting results of psychological research, and demonstrates information and technological literacy.

Graduates will demonstrate competency in the area of Information and Technological Literacy.

Graduates will demonstrate their ability to think critically in terms of identifying and summarizing a problem or question, analyzing and examining ideas and research findings, assessing the influence of context, and constructing and interpreting information within Psychology.

Graduates will demonstrate effective written communication skills in Psychology by explaining content and developing ideas, effectively organizing information, demonstrating a command of the written language, and using the conventions of language and documentation appropriately.

Graduates will demonstrate effective Oral Communication skills through their subject knowledge of Psychology, organization of ideas, adequate connection to an audience, and efficient delivery.

X = courses where outcomes are assessed/taught.